As part of his visit to London, Emin Amrullayev met with Nunzio Quacquarelli, founder and president of the Quacquarelli Symonds (QS) ranking agency.

During the meeting, participants discussed the current performance indicators and prospects for the further development of Azerbaijani universities in the QS rankings. At the same time, with a view to strengthening global competition in higher education, an exchange of views took place regarding projects planned for implementation in the coming period across various fields.

The parties also discussed the participation of the Azerbaijani delegation at the European Higher Education Summit, which will take place in Budapest next month, and the representation of our universities at the pavilion there.
