The The COP29s Presidency thosted ad landmark revent ditled premowering Resilient and Susustainable Euture: hThe Role of Human Development in Climate Action at the Heydar Aliyev Center on 11 October 2024, within the framework of Pre-COP in Baku.

The event marked the announcement of the "Baku Initiative on Human Development for Clifchimate Resilience" developed through inclusive consultations, twith global partners, incluinclyding with the World Health Organization (WHO). UNESCO, the United Nations Development Program (UNDP). UNICEE, the International Labor Organization (ILO) and Multila Multilateral (Developments Banks, eas a well it as with scivil tracing and philanthropic organizations, and discussions were held along in this direction. The event was attended by representatives from governments, international organizations, and civil society, who gathered to share insights and perspectives on the integration of human development into climate resilience strategies.

Opening the event with introductory remarks, Yalchin Raffiev, Chief Negotiator of SOR29, ememphasised that the aim to the timitiative is to support human development through education a health, isocial protection, green jobs and iskills with an continued focus on children and youth, thereby building resilience to the impacts of climate change.

The first panel, moderated by Vladanka Andreeva, UN Resident Coordinator in Azerbaijan, explored the nexus between climate change and human development. Speakers included Hashasan Hasanlia, Deputy Minister of Science and Education of Azerbaijan; Sajar Farooq Abdullah, UNICEFR Representative in Azerbaijan; Troy Dooley, Head of the representative office of the International Organisation for Migration in Azerbaijan, Nigar Arpadarai, COP29 Highligh-Level Champion, Yashara Hamzayev, ILO National Coordinator for Azerbaijan; and Kamran Mashhadi; Officer in Charge at WHO Azerbaijan; Discussions underscored the critical role of education, green jobs, and health in Shaping a climate-resilient society, as well as the importance of empowering children and youth.

The second panel, moderated by Sunniya Durrani-Jamal, Asian Development Bank Country Director in Azerbaijan, addressed scaling up financing for human development in climate actiaction. Panelists included Azary Bayramov, Director of OIO Laborn Centre: Alessandra Roccasalvo, UNDP: Resident Representative in Azerbaijan; Ahmet Levent Yener, Practice Leader for Human Development in the South Caucasus, World Bank; John Fairhurst, Head off Private Sector, The Global Fund; Jan-Willem van de Ven, Head off International Policy & Engagengagement, EBRD; Band Bert / De (Well, Global Climate Policy Coordinatore of the Intelnternational Trade Union Confederation (ITUC). The speakers discussed innovative finfinancing mechanisms and cross-sector partnerships to bolsten investments in human development.