During his visit to Paris, Minister of Science and Education Emin Amrullayev met with Azerbaijani doctoral students studying in France and other Western European countries.

At the meeting held in the Cultural Centre of the Republic of Azerbaijan in France, Emin Amrullayev emphasized the constant care of the state for the development of science and education in our country and informed the students about the reforms carried out in the higher education system in recent years and innovations in the educational system. The Minister highlighted the existing educational opportunities at Karabakh University, including the extension of the period of the current State Program for education abroad until 2028 and the allocation of an appropriate quota for doctoral students.

During the meeting, Emin Amrullaev answered questions of interest to students and discussed opportunities for doctoral students in their future academic and scientific activities.

The Minister urged the youth to take up research activities in our country after completing their education and contribute to the development of science and higher education.
